

Mark May updates

Contributed by Administrator
Sunday, 28 September 2008
Last Updated Sunday, 12 October 2008

Mark's surgery is complete and he is back home. You can read about his progress (and view photos) on his CarePages site:

Mark May CarePage

(You'll have to register with CareBridge)
The latest update follows:

Posted Sep 24, 2008 9:59am

We made it home safe and sound. Mark has been pretty tired so he is resting quite a bit. He was really happy to see Zack and Zoey and they were excited to see him. They were very careful with him and gave him gentle kisses and hugs. Zack thinks daddy's staples looks like a train track, which I would have to agree. In fact I hope to load some pictures later today so check back later today for those.

The Oncologist at Mayo Clinic are very booked up so we will not be able to move our appointments until next week so we will be going back up tomorrow afternoon to be there for our appointments on Friday.

Our local doctors are still checking into rehab options for us in Dubuque. Our hope is to get started next week with rehab. Mark looks forward to next Monday, which will be 10 days from the surgery which is the day his staples can come out. More later...